FIVE WOMEN. FIVE ARTISTS. ONE CITY.

“A first-rate portrait of great artists. Impressive!”

-NEW YORK MAGAZINE

“Vibrant, illuminating, tantalizing!” -PAPER MAGAZINE

“Filled with gorgeous shots of New York and from-the-heart discussions of artistry and inspiration, this wide-ranging appreciation is a glimpse into the artistic process.” -NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

In this “lyrical documentary about the intersection of location and imagination” (New York Times), filmmaker Chiara Clemente shines a light on five women artists whose inspiration is fueled by living in the “cauldron of creativity” – New York City.

The artists – Nancy Spero, Marina Abramovic, Kiki Smith, Ghada Amer and Swoon – are at different stages of life and have widely varying cultural backgrounds; each has a distinctive passion, character, motivation and artistic style. But they all have one thing in common: the city to which they have journeyed and now call home.

“AN EXCELLENT FILM.”

-PAULA FROSCH, METROPOLITAN MUSEUM OF ART

“Evocative, beautifully shot and absorbing, with a refreshing lack of sentimentality.”

-DAVID EBONY, ART IN AMERICA

“Castle’s life is truly inspirational, and his art can be sublime: a fierce creative vision fueled by determination and endless patience. The life must emerge in the art, and in this film it does so eloquently.”

-EDWARD J. SOZANSKI, PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER

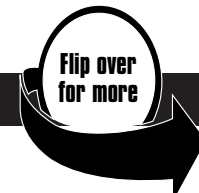

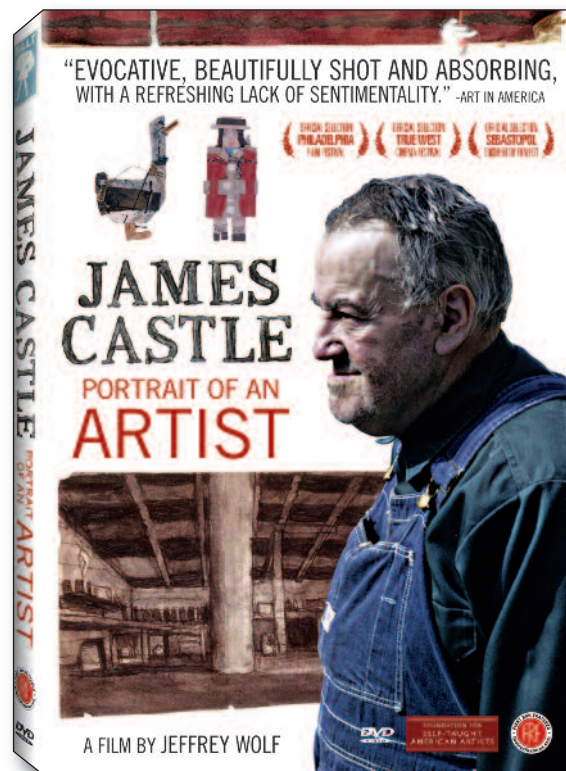

Born deaf in 1899 in rural Idaho – only nine years after that frontier territory was admitted to the Union – James Castle mined the local landscape of his family’s homesteads and his own deeply private world to produce an astonishing body of drawings, collages, and constructions which eventually gained worldwide recognition.

Jeffrey Wolf’s acclaimed film reveals Castle’s life and creative process, as told by family members, art historians, curators, artists, collectors, and members of the deaf community.

This inspirational story of a true Outsider Artist is a remarkable example of the triumph of the spirit – and the imagination.
