I'M DANGEROUS WITH LOVE is an underground adventure that traces one man's risky journey into the world of shamanic ritual. Dimitri Mugianis had been addicted to heroin for 20 years when a single dose of ibogaine, a powerful hallucinogen derived from the root of a West African plant, stopped his addiction cold.

Filmmaker Michel Negroponte enters the ibogaine subculture and follows Dimitri over three years, as he takes drug users through the same detox that saved his life. Problem is, ibogaine is an illegal drug in the U.S. When Negroponte tries ibogaine himself, he experiences firsthand its propensity to "break open the head."

BONUS MATERIALS include:

- Filmmaker Interview • Filmmaker Biography
- Ibogaine Resource Guide • & More

There's one cure for heroin addiction. But is it a cure? Methadonia is an expression that signifies the borderland between high and straight, where recovering heroin addicts on methadone "maintenance" exist. Passing the time on benzos and other prescription drugs that enhance the methadone, addicts find themselves in Methadonia for years, or decades.

This unflinching, intimate documentary from Michel Negroponte reveals the culture of addiction through the eyes and lives of men and women trapped in Methadonia.
