AN UPDATED VERSION OF THE DOCUMENTARY HEY, BOO: HARPER LEE & TO KILL A MOCKINGBIRD

"A much appreciated glimpse into the life and legacy of the beloved author...and a fitting tribute to an American treasure."

- Jennifer Merin, ABOUT.COM

"Murphy chose a most worthy subject!"

- Stephanie Merry, WASHINGTON POST

"Well worth seeing! Filmmaker Mary Murphy amazingly manages to get to the heart of To Kill a Mockingbird, why it affects people of all colors, religions, social backgrounds and degrees of education, and why it remains relevant today."

- Rex Reed, NEW YORK OBSERVER

To everyone's surprise, fifty-five years after the publication of To Kill a Mockingbird, Harper Lee has published another novel. Go Set a Watchman was written before Lee's beloved masterpiece, as director Mary McDonagh Murphy explains in this update of her 2011 documentary Hey, Boo: Harper Lee & To Kill a Mockingbird.

Murphy's new update of her film, Harper Lee: From Mockingbird to Watchman, sifts through the facts and speculation surrounding Lee and both her novels, and includes interviews with Lee's older sister, close friends, and admirers including Oprah Winfrey, Scott Turow, Anna Quindlen, Tom Brokaw, Wally Lamb and more.
