

FIRST RUN FEATURES PRESENTS

"A cracking good film! Cutsy, tense and disturbing...dramatic twists and reversals. Packed with piercing performances."

-THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER

"Sensually rendered but tough-as-twine. As cuttngly observed as it is pristinely composed. Few, if any, previous films have explored the psyche of military women in the Middle East conflict with quite such shading and sensitivity."

-VARIETY

"Powerful and compelling. A scintillating investigation into memory, guilt, and what it means to be a woman in an aggressively masculine environment."

-ONE ROOM WITH A VIEW

On their way home from Afghanistan, a band of French soldiers stop in Cyprus for decompression: three days at a sun-splashed resort, where they will undergo intense psychological debriefing. There, amidst the crystal-blue waters and hordes of vacationing tourists, Marine (Soko) and Aurore (Ariane Labeled) – two of only three women in their male-dominated unit – confront rage, trauma, and army sexism as they struggle to readjust to "normal" life.

This riveting drama – winner of the Best Screenplay award in the Un Certain Regard competition at Cannes – is an all-too-rare exploration of war's psychological wounds on female soldiers.
